

Kills Bond At Walpole

WALPOLE, Mass. (AP) —

An explosion in a loft above the foundry shop at Walpole State Prison today killed Stanley H. Bond, 37, of Pasadena, Calif., awaiting trial in a robbery-murder, and injured another inmate, prison officials said.

A Corrections Department spokesman said William Lorenzen, 26, of Oakland, Calif., serving a 3-to-5 year term for larceny, was injured seriously and was taken to Norwood Hospital.

The spokesman said Bond was pronounced dead at the scene by the hospital's visiting physician, Dr. Harold Hawkins, of the Harvard School of Public Health.

The spokesman said both men had been assigned to work in the foundry, but were not supposed to be in the loft area, which is reached by a ladder and through a trap door, and is above the foundry.

He said there was no immediate indication of the cause of the blast, but it was possible the two were trying to put together a bomb.

He said District Atty. George Burke of Norfolk County was called to investigate.

Bond's death came only one day after his case was transferred from Suffolk to Plymouth County Superior Court, to begin June 12.
